Dear Kate,
Here's to the crazy ones. The ones who see the world as it is, not as it should be. The imaginers. The dreamers. The troublemakers. The round pegs in the square holes. The ones who see things that others don't. The ones who are not afraid of rules. And who are not afraid to say "I don't know." They push the envelope. They rebel. They risk. They glory in it. They are the ones who change the world. They are the ones who are the only ones who can't be ignored. Because they understand that the only way to change the world is to think differently. Take care. Stay hungry. Stay foolish.

Dear Kate,
Here's to the crazy ones. The ones who see things differently. The troublemakers. The round pegs in the square holes. The ones who see things not just as they are, but as they could be. The ones who create new ideas, new paradigms, new status quo. You can quote them, disagree with them, glorify or vilify them, but let it be said that no one who has ever changed the world has ever listened to them. They push the world's boundaries, while some may see them as mad. They are not. Because they are not thinking like you are. They are. Take action. Jobs.
